Attendance of museums and galleries.

I would like to write a short report ^{about} how many people attend galleries and museums. It is drawn on the data.

The first thing that needs to be said is the rate drops continuously rapidly. Many visitors find it museums and galleries unnecessary to attend owing to the fact everything can be seen on the internet. Moreover, people reckon that there are more places where they can spend some time and ^{see} fascinating things.

After comparing ^{the data} it could be said that during 2013 the most visited ~~was~~ museum was Science Museum. But the attendance respectively dropped. Let's take a look at British Museum. It has a substantial difference as well as National Museum. In addition, Tate Gallery has the least amount of attenders through the years.

To increase visitors, firstly, we should make the advertisement on how museums and galleries are important to expand our vision. Secondly, teachers in schools should appeal on visiting such places. They ought to give it pupils homework about certain museums. It will be fun not only for teachers, but students also. Thirdly, it would be good for attendance, if the entrance was cheaper than it actually is.

By way of conclusion, after taking a ~~of~~forementioned or report into consideration, I hold on to the idea that many people ~~lost~~ their interest in some extent ~~lost~~ their interest in galleries and museums. But there are still ways to
