Attendance of museums and galleries.

Introduction:

According to the Mass Media nowadays there is rise of travelling citizens. That is why people can notice growth in attendance of museums and galleries. Social Statistics and other organisations can draw on graphs which can clearly shows us the situation within museums and galleries. In addition to their main aim these graphs can familiarise us with popular museums among people.

Summarizing General Information:

As it is evident from the table in our time most of museums and galleries reached a high point in attendance in England. Generally we can say that Social Statistics is able to rate national galleries and museums in this country. By summarizing information from this table it's becoming clear that we can see a fall of interest among our citizens in attendance Natural History Museum and Science Museum.

Comparisons:

In 2013 the attendance of British Museum, National Gallery, Tate Gallery was at the lowest point but now it reached a peak. On one hand we can say that table data shows that there is not the best time for Natural History Museum and Science Museum. On the other hand now we can see a growth of attendance.

Recommendations and Conclusion:

It is clear that museums and galleries should show more respectively and enjoyable information. In addition to this the graph shows substantial data about rising interests in Arts. Because of it we recommend to show more Arts.
