It was a trip I'll never forget. One day, in the middle of autumn I, my parents and my little sister decided to go to a beautiful place near the mountains and a small river. We thought it was a good place to relax, play volleyball and eat a delicious soup. However, our small trip turned out to be the most challenging adventure I have ever been on.

As soon as we got to the place my sister, an annoying five-year old kid who was wearing a white sweater and grey jeans, got out of our red pickup and started playing with her favourite green ball. I sighed and decided to help my parents with unpacking. When we finished, I looked around only to find my sister chasing after her ball in the river. I screamed "Fiona! Get out of the river right now!" when she suddenly fell. My heart started beating quicker and quicker and I realized that I couldn't see her anymore. I was so confused and lost that I didn't even know what to do. Thankfully, my father ran into my sister's direction and saved her, jumping into the river and reaching for her. His blue jacket was wet and his striped hat fell off.

A strange bewildering feeling gripped me only when everything was over. I was so afraid of losing my sister even if I thought I didn't care about her. How could I be so ignorant to not realize that she was actually important for me? This experience shawn me the value of life.
