It was a trip I'll never forget. My family and I went on a camping trip. My mom and dad are masters of bewildering.

Although it was a bizarre and exciting adventure, we took only one photo. In this picture my dad is holding a cloth on my sister's head, while mom holds her hand. On that day we were wearing warm ~~outfits~~ ^{outfits} suited for camping. Dad was wearing his funny hat and sister had her beloved scars.

The trip was challenging, since we had to sleep in a tent and cook on an open fire. Before we arrived I said ^{to} to my sister: "You know? You should be careful. There're lots of poisonous snakes in forest!". Later I regretted every single word I said. While running around, my sister saw a snake! She ran away from it as fast as she could, but then tripped on a huge log, trying to jump over it. She hurt her head. Father immediately ran to her, asking: "Are you OK? Can you stand? Show me your head!". Later we found out that she consued a tree branch for a ^{to} snake. I was so sorry and begged for forgiveness for my dumb and ignorant joke. Dad cleaned her head with soaked cloth, while mother hold her hand. I thought this would be a great memory and took a photo.

We drove home, ~~the~~ laughing and smiling with relief.
